USDOJ, Having written several times before, I am again urging you to close this seemingly endless litigation against the most significant company to come along in 50 years. I continue to believe they have done no wrong, unless being an aggressive competitor is contrary to our free market ideals. This case was initiated by a couple of cry-baby competitors who couldn't keep up with Gates and Ballmer. It is now taking on the role as a showcase for a few maverick state attorneys general who are more interested in pursuing their own goals than those of the public they represent. Haven't we spent enough time and money on this witch hunt? Let's allow the original judgement to stand, and get back to the task of rebuilding our economy rather than tearing it down. Thanks for your consideration. Peter C. Palette
